674 his comrade is stationed. The latter keeps his place at least one hour longer, waiting to see if by chance the theft has been discovered in the camp. Should an alarm be given and search made for the stolen animals, he tries to attract attention to himself and then leads the pursuers in a different direction from that taken by his comrade, until, after eluding them altogether, he makes haste to join him. Then, mounting the captured animal, he makes his escape while the pursuers are following the wrong scent.

685 If a thief is seen crawling near, he may be shot at sight. If he is caught, his captors beat him, jaḳtolûneh, revile him, jaṣaḫmûneh, and, if he is unknown to them, tie him fast to prevent him from running away and stealing something after all. After sunrise breakfast is given him and he is free to go wherever he wishes. In case the thief with the stolen mare escapes and his watching comrade is caught, ḳaẓîb, the latter may be killed on the spot but must not be held in fetters to compel his comrade to return the stolen animal.

681 609 Fettering is not an established custom, mâ hi 'âdaten sânijaten, among friends. A member of a hostile tribe, when caught in camp at night, is generally put in the irons used for fettering a mare's forelegs in the evening, and he is then called rabîṭ. In order to save his life he must offer some animals of his herd as a ransom. In this case it is said that "the captive sent his movable property instead of his neck, ar-rabîṭ ḳallaṭ ḥalâleh ḥiddâm rukubteh."

577 626 672 To steal from a fellow tribesman or even from a neighbor is considered a disgrace. A thief of this type is called bawwâḳ, neṭûl, or nedû'. No one will suffer him to come to his tent. Should he enter a tent in another camp, any one knowing him will instantly call the owner's attention to him: "This man is a bawwâḳ. Let him not sleep in your place! Hâḍa bawwâḳ lâ tḫallûh jamraḥ 'endakom." However, if his sons are known to be honest, they are not made to suffer for their father's shame.

685 627 If anyone can show indisputable proofs that a fellow tribesman has stolen, for instance, a firearm from him and if the other denies it, the robbed man takes two or three of the offender's camels, drives them before the tent of a more powerful neighbor, and, after obtaining his protection for them, eḍḫalhen 'alejh, brings his witnesses. The protector must then
